

King of castles spotted

A LOST castle has been identified as one of the most important strongholds in medieval England.

Archaeologists are studying the site of Sheffield Castle in the city centre.

A Sheffield University spokesman said: "This reveals how Sheffield Castle was among the most important political and cultural centres in medieval England, home to aristocrats who played major roles in local, national and international affairs."

